this is the 'fabulous' part

I love clothes. I love looking at them in magazines, I love rummaging through racks in stores, I love trying them on... I think you get the picture.

When I was at the Indy Grand Prix of Sonoma at Infineon Raceway this weekend I stopped by Betty's Garage. Betty's Garage is company that designs race apparel for women. Kristi Chatham, a resident of Bethel Island, Calif., started the company and used her love for hot rods and classic cars as inspiration for her fun, retro designs.

Having seen the clothes up-close and in-person, I absolutely adore them. They're beyond cute and I think wearing them would only serve to enhance your days out at the track. They'll definitely get you some attention from the male population. Plus, it's just nice to have some options, instead of having to don some hideously colorful graphic racing t-shirt. At left, Kristi Chatham, owner of Betty's Garage, is wearing the Drag Racing Jacket in pink and blue.

This is my favorite piece. It also comes in black and white and black and pink. Below are more photos of designs from Betty's Garage. To find out where you can get these fabulous threads check out BettysRaceGarage.com
